Abstract

The purpose of this document is to map the agri-food digital innovation & acceleration ecosystem for the 11 regions represented in the Food-scalEU project. This mapping is designed to identify the key actors, interactions, connections, and roles of accelerators and to identify the available acceleration services at regional level. The outcome of this mapping is meant to give the trends of the acceleration ecosystems of each partner.

1 Introduction

The vision of the Food-scalEUp project is to foster the capacity of European regional agri-food digital innovation ecosystems, especially in “emerging” and “moderate” innovator regions, to be more connected, effective, impactful, resilient, and internationally recognized.

More specifically, the mission of Food-scalEUp project is to: develop higher quality business acceleration services in agri-food digital innovation ecosystems of emerging and moderate innovator regions; expand the connections, knowledge, exchange, collaboration at regional, European and international level, between key people representing the different actors of the agri-food digital innovation ecosystems involved in the project; and balance the scaling-up of start-ups and SMEs and the creation of local high-value added jobs in the European regions involved in the project, by balancing the capacity of agri-food digital innovation and acceleration ecosystems in those regions.

2 Mapping methodology

Acceleration activities are led by diverse actors, with diverse roles and objectives. In the context of the Food-scalEUp project, we set up a database where partner filled information to best describe their agri-food digital acceleration ecosystem in terms of actors involved and programmes available.

In the framework of the Regional Innovation Scoreboard desk, the project partners through research, internal expertise and external consultation intend to map their key acceleration stakeholders. It resulted in providing an overview of the acceleration ecosystem in each of the partnership regions. In this way, we have collected and identified each acceleration building capacity of the Food-scalEUp partnership into a directory of actors and a portfolio of services.

To enable further comparison, the project partners have initially agreed on a set of common acceleration ecosystem items and definition allowing identification across the share of role, type of structure and available acceleration services.

In that regard, we have decided to extract 2 main data from the mapping:

- ❖ Acceleration programmes and services
- ❖ Acceleration actors

2.1 Acceleration programmes and services

In the mapping, we have considered agrifood accelerators (referred to as vertical) as well as accelerators dealing indirectly with agrifood companies or having a cross-cutting thematic focus (referred to as horizontal), including all levels of development and available services.

Table 1. Portfolio of available programmes and acceleration services - Example

Key acceleration programs portfolio		Involvement					Available services
		Mandatory presence in the region	Idea & Prototype	Start-up	Scale-up	SME	Hosting, Co-working & Incubation	Training	Coaching & mentoring	Networking & matchmaki	Visibility & media coverage	Funding	IPR and legal services
Vertical: Agrifood	Accelerator 1
	Accelerator 2
Horizontal: Cross-cutting	Accelerator 3
	Accelerator 4

To be able to assess, we have focused on a set of accelerations items detailed below.

Identified acceleration services

Following internal discussions, consortium exchanges and cluster expertise; hereby are presented the 7 business services that have been decided to observe in this mapping, when empowered by acceleration service providers.

Identified stage of involvement

We seek to address the target audience of acceleration services and in that regard, need to take into consideration the development stage of end-users.

Vertical and Horizontal approach

In the interest to distinguishing the mapped information and in particular the available acceleration programmes, we have used a vertical and horizontal approach to classify the information, which allows us to catalyse the availability of digital agri-food support.

2.2 Acceleration actors

In the mapping, a key entry was to qualify the role of the identified actor and its status in 4-Helix. We have put those two data regarding the shape of acceleration landscape.

A same actor, being able to have different role, may be counted in several category of roles (ASP, External...); however it will count as 1 only if it appears in several accelerator with the same role (a same actor may be manager of several accelerator).

From the directory of actors it resulted a series of graphs which are made to present the shape of each ecosystem, as the highs of the rectangles representing the number of actors key actors by role. Therefore, in the practice of this mapping, the same entity may have several entries in the ecosystem and can be mentioned several times but for different acceleration settings.

Acceleration ecosystems landscape

Acceleration ecosystems are structured around acceleration programmes in which the key players involved make acceleration services operational and available.

4 Helix approach

The following 4H approach is meant to provide awareness about the interaction of key actors involved in acceleration business activities.

4 Conclusion

In total, the Food-scalEU partners mapped 699 actors. All the actors mapped are directly involved at the regional level and represent the innovation and digital acceleration ecosystem. Similarly, the results also indicate the resources and capacity of each partner to build new acceleration services.

Each region presents models that can be built upon and where several elements such as the distribution of roles, the type of structure involved (4H approach) and the set of available acceleration services in which they are involved allow to determine who does what and how it is organised.

The results presented in this paper are not intended to be compared here, as this is provided in deliverable D1.3. The aim here is to give a picture of the partnership regional landscape and how the roles are articulated. In this way, we can observe that the key roles are those of the manager, the promoter, and the ASP. In this sense, we can draw some preliminary observations such as the involvement of managers who can impact the rest of the system and who tend to have a double role as promoters. External advisors belong to the acceleration ecosystem but can be seen as potential ASPs, or a pipeline of territorial resources and building capacity.
